President's Message

The saying that you can't keep a good man down, must surely be true in the case of our executive officer, friend, and colleague Ron Ikin. As many of you will be aware Ron is battling a major health issue but in true Bulldog spirit he has not let a mere life-threatening bout of illness interfere too much with his executive officer work. From his sick-bed he maintains control and ensures that all is done to keep the show on the road. I know all members wish Ron a speedy recovery.

As the ISEA president it was again a privilege and highly satisfying experience to host the presentation ceremony for the ISEA Award for Excellence in the Administration of Public Education. I am sure that all present felt, as I did, great pride and a strong sense of achievement in the outstanding contribution that members of the ISEA make to the quality and delivery of public education in NSW. In presenting this year's award Michael Coutts-Trotter, Director-General, recognised and congratulated Lorraine Rowles for her work in supporting the teaching of literacy, one of the flagship programs of public education in this state.

With the election of a new state government, senior officers across the public sector are busy briefing their respective ministers. Many of our members will be those officers preparing the briefing information for the incoming education minister, Adrian Piccoli. Their work under pressure will probably go unrecognised but I acknowledge the skill with which they inform government to ensure smooth and effective service delivery.

I would also like to take this opportunity to thank Michael Coutts-Trotter for his work and support as Director-General and wish him well in his new position in the Finance area of state government.

Lastly, at the time of my retirement, I would like to wish you all well for the future. I will continue in the President's role until the transition to a new president is completed, either at or after the AGM.

Excellence Award Ceremony Report

The ceremony to present the fourth annual ISEA Award for Excellence in the Administration of Public Education was held recently in The Atrium, Bridge Street. At what has become the feature event for the ISEA, the Director-General, Michael Coutts-Trotter, presented Lorraine Rowles with the ISEA's 2010 Excellence Award at a well-attended ceremony.

Lorraine is currently Manager Teacher Learning, Professional Learning and Leadership Development Directorate and was nominated for the award for her work from 2007–2010 when, as leader of the literacy team, within the Curriculum Directorate she strategically managed the development and implementation of a significant body of innovative, evidenced-based literacy resources and programs to support classroom teachers from Kindergarten to Year 12.

In speaking of Lorraine’s outstanding contribution to the teaching of literacy in NSW, Ken Olah, Senior Project Officer, Australian Curriculum Phase 1, made reference to the highly professional and dynamic way in which Lorraine worked and led her team through a myriad of issues and viewpoints all of which had to be overcome before this multi-faceted program could be successfully implemented across the NSW state school system. Ken went on to describe the key aspects of Lorraine’s work.

Under the Best Start Initiative, the first system-wide, common, entry-to-school literacy assessment tool was developed and implemented for all students entering Kindergarten in NSW public schools. This assessment provides teachers and families with a balanced and comprehensive insight into what young learners know and can do in critical aspects of literacy on entry to school.

A new Literacy Policy and a foundational literacy guide, An Introduction to Quality Literacy Teaching, provide a platform from which all teachers from Kindergarten to Year 12 can examine, review and expand their literacy understandings and practices to ensure quality literacy teaching.

A K–6 Literacy Continuum maps literacy development throughout the K–6 years of schooling in eight aspects of literacy, identified in the research as most critical to successful literacy development in the early and middle years of schooling. The continuum supports teachers to more effectively assess, plan and teach literacy and provides a mechanism for tracking and monitoring the development of each student.

Two new literacy teaching guides, Literacy Teaching Guide: Phonics; and Literacy Teaching Guide: Phonemic Awareness, provide teachers with precise, straight forward information about the teaching of these two critical aspects of literacy. These highly-received guides provide clear principles, debunk myths and demonstrate effective phonics and phonemic awareness teaching.

Focus on Reading 3–6, a ground-breaking, new, reading program, that provides intensive professional learning support for middle years teachers is designed to arrest the ‘slump’ that can occur in student reading performance in the middle years of schooling. The program provides blended, action-based, intensive professional learning support to teachers about the teaching of the critical aspects of comprehension, vocabulary development and fluent text reading.

In presenting the award to Lorraine the Director-General, Michael Coutts-Trotter, acknowledged that this body of work has ensured that NSW public schools have remained at the forefront of literacy developments, teacher learning and student achievement in the area of literacy. As well, through her membership and input on the Australian Curriculum Advisory Panel for English, Lorraine is continuing to make a significant contribution to the development of a National Literacy Continuum.

Retirement Celebrations – Grant Beard

Friends and colleagues recently gathered to celebrate the career and retirement of Grant Beard member of the ISEA for 15 years. Grant has had a long and distinguished career with Department, commencing in 1973 when he was appointed as a teacher of mathematics at Maroubra Bay High School, and continuing as Head Teacher at Tempe High School, Secondary Mathematics Consultant, Leader of Test Development at the Board of Studies, Leader of School Staffing, and since 1998 as Manager of Workforce Planning. In his retirement Grant hopes to have more time to pursue his various
